Missouri Excursions.
via the Missouri Pacific, "El Scott route," will leave Wichita Thursday, Nov. 23rd, 10th, 24th, and Dec. 10th. This is the great southern route, especially during the fall and winter months, by reason of the delightful climate and many places of interest through which it passes, affords a more genuinely pleasurable trip than other routes. This is the only line taking passengers via the southern route and giving them the privilege of returning via the Denver & Rio Grande R.R., the "Scenic Line of America" with stopover at Salt Lake, Utah. Pullman and free family sleepers run through with one change. $20 round trip, good six months and choice of routes returning, with stopover privileges at any point. Cheap one day excursions to all points on the same route. An employ of this company accompanies all excursions, whose duty it is to look after the comfort of the excursionists. For tickets, maps and all information, apply to N. C. K. & N. 14-1

Important Notice.
The Chicago, Kansas & Nebraska railway "Rock Island Route" will open its line into Kansas City, Sunday, Sept. 13, 1887, with two through trains each way daily. Elegant Pullman sleepers and a superb equipment generally, has been provided for these through trains, and passengers from any point on the C. & N. railroad, will find this new route to Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, and all points north, east and west, not only the shortest but in all respects the most desirable and comfortable route in the state.

Our St. Joseph line will also have two through trains daily to and from the southwest with a brand new equipment especially built for this service. Passengers taking this line to the north, northwest, east and southeast, will find the accommodations strictly first class. Time tables for these new trains will be given to the public in a few days. COMMON ERRORS CORRECTED.

Exaggerated Notions Which Even Scientific Observers Have Indorsed.
Ignorant folk, whilomongers, and even scientific observers have disseminated many erroneous and exaggerated notions which are not readily eradicated. We are still told, for instance, of the Norwegian maelstrom, a frightful whirling chasm in the sea capable of sucking down the largest ships, though in reality this fearful "whirlpool" is simply a run of the tide through a sloping channel is rarely dangerous, and then chiefly on account of the rocks on which it may draw vessels. Sir John Herschel gave his indorsement to the statement that stars may be seen in the daytime from the bottom of a well, but this has been proven to be an error by tests from a shaft nearly half a mile deep.

Mr. John Murdoch has recently shown that the Eskimos do not, as text books of physiology affirm, dose through their long winter night, keeping up their bodily heat by enormous fires of blubber and lamp oil, but that their winter life is active, their food mostly cooked and their consumption of oil not excessive. A still widely accepted belief is that the hair snake is a wonderful transformation of a horse's hair when it is in water, though these creatures (known to science as Gordius aquaticus) really grow from eggs, and in early stages inhabit the bodies of insects. A very old idea, without foundation in fact, is that crocodiles shed mournful tears while stories of toads imprisoned in solid rock are numerous and supported by much evidence, but have probably resulted from imperfect observation.

Accounts of the germination of grain from the mummy pits of Egypt have arisen from deception practiced by the Arabs in placing fresh seeds with the belongings of the mummies. Though now known to be incorrect, the inference that the moon influences the weather is a very natural one to untrained observers, and is far less absurd than a thousand vagaries that gain credence, such as the dropping of live reptiles from the clouds, the ejection of live snakes and other creatures from the human stomach, the localization of water by a forked stick, the extinguishment of fire by sunshine, etc.—Arkansas Traveler.

An Editor's Strange Experience.
"I know a good joke on an editor from Helena, M. T.," said a conductor on the St. Paul, "and I guess I'll have to tell it. He's a colored man, but I don't give you his last name. Last week he came into St. Paul on business, after registering at the best hotel in town, started out to see the sights. It was about 10 o'clock in the morning when he returned, a little worse for wear. It happened that the night porter who showed him to his room was only half awake, and, without knowing what he was doing, unlocked the door into the bathroom attached to the apartment assigned for his use, mumbled 'Goodnight, sir,' and disappeared. Next morning at the breakfast table the Montana Journalist met an acquaintance and said to him: "Fine hotel, this." "Yes, one of the best in the country." "Do you like their new fangled beds?" "Their beds are all right, though I didn't know that there was anything new about them." "Well, they've got the darndest bed in my room yet ever set eyes on. It's more like a coffin, and there wasn't a blamed bit of cover on it. I was cold all night. It's true that it might have been water so badly that when a few girls thrived in the night bed, I don't have to get out of bed for a drink, but the worst of it was in my case that it was just my damned luck to leave the thing running a little the last time I took a drink out of it, and when I woke up again I was nigh drowned in cold water. Never spent such a miserable night in my life."—Chicago Herald.

A Police Captain's Experience.
Police Capt. Williams went to the St. Lawrence river on an excursion a year or two ago. On the deck of the steamer where he sat with a couple of gentlemen near by, one of them pointed out to him a New York, when one of them dropped into a talk about Capt. Williams himself. According to the young man's relation to his friend, Capt. Williams was about the toughest man west of God's creation. Capt. Williams stood for a long time in my case that it was just my damned luck to leave the thing running a little the last time I took a drink out of it, and when I woke up again I was nigh drowned in cold water. Never spent such a miserable night in my life."—Chicago Herald.

A Strange Mixture of Blood.
Probably the strangest mixture of blood that can be found anywhere in this country among what are known as the upper classes occurs in our northwestern cities, notably in St. Paul. In the early days the French Huguenot Bay company frequently intermarried with the Indians and brought up large families of half breeds. These intermarried with the Americans who settled in this section of the country, and in the course of a few years became the social leaders in the cities that grew up as if by magic. Indians blood, therefore, as in the northwest, never considered as a disgrace, and the most stylish young ladies thought nothing of entertaining their grandmothers, who were Indian squaws. The Indian mien seldom appeared, but the women were very fond of visiting the cities for short periods and then returning to their tribes.

In one case the ancestress of one of the most prominent families in St. Paul used to visit her descendants twice a year, but never could be induced to sleep in a house, and the entrance to the mansion was occupied by the bones of the old grandmothers whenever she paid a visit to her grandchildren. This was not an isolated instance. In one of a number, and thirty years ago the spectacle of a lady dressed in the height of fashion, accompanied by a withered squaw, and a basket, was so common on the streets of St. Paul as to attract the attention of George L. Bodwick in "Globe-Democrat."

Quick Work.
Upon a lot a Kansas man killed, cleaned, cooked and ate a chicken in less than fifteen minutes. Lots of women take longer time than that to make morning pudding the day before, to make the next day neighbors believe they are cooking breakfast for breakfast. Philadelphia Herald.

The Window Decorator.
Formerly the highest paid man about a retail store was the accountant or book-keeper, or perchance the manager, if the business justified such a person. Now the window decorator divides the honors and commands as high a salary as any attendant of the house. His function is an important one. His labor, though not arduous physically, requires something of the gift of the artist and hence commands good wages. There is no more important position in a modern retail store than that of the window decorator.—Chicago Herald.

SLAVES ON THE RED SEA.

GREAT BOLDNESS OF SLAVE STEALERS FROM SOUDAN.

Slave Dhows Captured by British Vessels.
A Seven Weeks' Drive from Khartoum to the Coast—The Traffic Secretly Fostered.

A few weeks ago it was announced in the house of commons that the slave trade had been reopened on a large scale on the northeast coast of Africa. Sir J. Ferguson, the under secretary of state for foreign affairs, said that both the English and French governments had taken energetic steps to suppress the evil. Since that time British vessels in the Red sea have captured four slave dhows and the Egyptian government has fitted them out as cruisers for the suppression of the infamous trade. The slave trade was never so bold before. They take their human cargoes to Jeddah, which is the port of Mecca on the Red sea, and they boldly incur the greatest risks. Less than three weeks ago the launch of a British man of war was attacked by a slaver, and six Englishmen were wounded in the fight. The dhow was, however, sunk, and forty-three slaves were rescued.

The slave dealers are Soudanese, the followers of the new Mahdi. All restriction upon slave stealing in the Soudan being now removed, they have once more tapped their old source of supply in southern Darfur and the Bahr el Ghazal region. Slaves are being driven by thousands to Khartoum. If the dealers can only smuggle their victims over to Jeddah and Mecca, their profits are enormous. Young women and big boys who can be driven to the coast at a total cost of not over $25 apiece will readily in the larger Arab towns for from five to ten times that amount.

GREAT RISKS—ENOUGH PROFITS.
The temptation to run great risks in order to pocket these great profits is enormous, particularly as the Soudanese are in desperate need of trade goods, and the slavers have only to return home with cloth and other desirable commodities to reap another large harvest. The slaver trade is now carried out not only by the great profits of the business, but also by the fact that all trade is contraband. The merchants run just as great risks if they are caught with ostrich feathers or ivory, on which the profit is much less than on slaves. They are therefore confiding measures to take.

The sufferings of the poor captives are terrible. It takes about seven weeks to drive them from Khartoum to the coast. One party that recently left Khartoum 200 strong reached the coast only 200 in number. The bones of the other hundred strew the route from Khartoum to the sea. It is said that about 2,000 slaves have been smuggled across the Red Sea to Jeddah since Jan. 1. It is remarkable that the semi-barbarians of the Soudan are able to carry on so large a trade in these. Every dhow whose hold is packed with black merchandise crosses the sea highway followed by more of the vessels plying between Europe and the Orient.

The slaves are taken to some little harbor or anchorage north or south of Suakin, which is the only point where British vessels are stationed. They are quickly packed into dhows and shipped over to Jeddah in the night time. The people of Jeddah and Mecca are slave dealers themselves, and through sympathizers with the Soudanese, and the traffic is secretly fostered by the Turkish authorities in those towns. It has just been discovered that many of these new slaves have been introduced into Egypt by pilgrim bands returning home, who pretend that the captives are legitimate parts of their caravan. Many of these slaves have been liberated by the authorities.—New York Sun.

Disease Germs in the Air.
Recent experiments by Dr. Percy F. Frankland, described here in the English Society of Arts, show the following number of disease germs found in a given quantity of air in different localities:
Top of Primrose hill, 9; bottom of Primrose hill, 24; top of Norwich cathedral spire 650 feet, 7; at the bottom, 15; Golden gallery of St. Paul's cathedral, 11; in the church of St. Paul's, 10; in Kensington gardens, Hyde park, 48; Exhibition road, 554; in the chemical laboratory of Science institution, 32; in the room of meeting of the Royal society near the close of the session, 452.

In a third class railway carriage containing four persons, soon after starting, the number of organisms that were falling on a square foot per minute was 365. Soon after this the carriage was filled, containing ten persons, after which it was found that the number falling per square foot per minute was 3,123. At a distance from land of ninety sea miles the average of the organisms was given one organism in twenty-six liters, when the distance from land was 120 miles it was one in ninety-three liters. Out of twelve experiments made at a minimum distance of 120 sea miles in eleven the air was absolutely germ free, so that it would appear that the maximum distance to which, under ordinary circumstances, micro-organisms can be transported across the sea is about 120 sea miles.

The Territorial Loan Agent.
"You are accused of holding up a man at the depot, showing a six shooter under his nose and making him give you $25," said a justice of the peace at a Dakota loan agent who had been brought before him.

"These are about the facts in the case," replied the loan agent.

"Then I shall be obliged to hold you for robbery."

"Just let me explain how it was. You see he was leaving the country—the train was already in sight. I knew he had the $25 and there wasn't time to get it any other way. This business method may be slightly irregular, but the time was so short that it was the best I could do, and that's all there is about it. If I had known he was going sooner I should have got him under a chain of circumstances, and then everything would have been regular."

"Well," replied the judge, "if that's the case I suppose it's all right. Try and get the mortgage, though, when you can—it's more business like."—Dulles Bell.

Plants Peculiar to Certain Soils.
Dr. R. W. Raymond lately called attention to the reputed connection between certain plants and the metals in the underlying soil. Thus the zinc violet or Galuniviolet—sometimes regarded as a distinct species under the name of Viola calaminaria—grows out of the hills containing calamine, or zinc ore, in the British Prussia and Belgium. A plant, Anemone ranunculoides, is believed by American miners to grow only in localities containing galena, and Eriogonum ovalifolium is probably destined to be known in the west as the silver plant.—Arkansas Traveler.

Photography in the Navy.
Photographic outfits are being placed on board all United States men of war with the purpose of illustrating dispatches. All points of value in navigation are to be photographed and the pictures are to be preserved for reference at the navy department. The officers are encouraged to quality themselves as photographers.—Boston Transcript.

Worshipping a Prayer Book.
A missionary in Africa found a heathen tribe worshipping an Episcopal prayer book, and was encouraged to think that his lines had fallen in pleasant places. He wanted to know how it was. He learned that the heathen had adopted the book as an incense of its golden edges, after eating the missionary who owned it.—Norristown Herald.
